Accident Occurs Near Home of Victims, Boys Being Struck While They Were Crossing Street.

John Herbert Earl Watts, 9 years old, of 147 Bellwood avenue, was struck and almost instantly killed shortly after 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Bellwood avenue and Chestnut street, and Ralph Galblin, aged 11, of 161 Bellwood avenue, suffered a broken leg when they were struck by an automobile driven, police declare, by Dr. W. T. Rogers, of 1091

Dr. Rogers later went to police headquarters, where he reported the accident, being released under $1,000 bond on a charge of reckless driving. Following the crash an ambulance from Grady hospital rushed to the scene, but the youth died before arrival of the machine. The other boy was taken to the Institution, where he was detained Thursday night, suffering from the fracture and a nervous

The accident occurred near the home of the Watts boy. It was stated that the injured boys ran into the street abile at play, and were struck before the driver of the car could bring the machine to a stop. The auto was being driven south on Bellwood avenue, and the accident occurred at Chestnut street.

When announcement of the state's plan to commence the trial Tuesday came, Attorneys H. A. Allen and Louis Foster, who have been retained as counsel for DuPre, stated to DuPre and his father at the Fulton Tower that they will not be ready on that date, and said they will ask for additional time in which to prepare their defense.

Attorney Allen intimated that the alleged insanity of his client will not be stressed, although it may be introduced as an extenuating circumstance. The prime factors entering in their defense and those with which it is honed DuPre may be saved from the gallows, are his extreme youth, his association with criminals and his lack of will power to resist alcoholic drinks.

Attempts to secure from Chief of Detectives Poole the names of the two Atlanta pawnbrokers, alleged members of the organized syndicate of diamond thieves, whose organization was said to have been revealed in DuPre's confession. resulted in failure. Neither could their identity be learned from other sources. It is believed that the additional indictments to be returned Friday by the grand jury will contain the names of these two men.

Intimations were made public in police circles that the two pawnbrokers are well known locally and that a sensation will be created when their identity is divulged.

It was rumored Thursday that among the list of indictments by the grand jury will be changes of the charge against some of the men already indicted or actually under arrest, and that charges at present resting against them charging them as being accessories after the fact will be changed to accessories before the fact.

According to Chief Poole, the accomplices named in DuPre's confession are C. R. Buckley, taxicab driver, who carried DuPre to Chattanooga the night of the tragedy; Jack J. Worth, alleged to have had knowledge of the deed both prior to and after the robbery and killing; C. A. Wiley, broker, who is charged with having aided DuPre in disposing of rings stolen from Davis & Freeman Jewelry company before the Nat Kalser store robbery, and Betty Andrews, DuPre's sweetheart, who is alleged to have had knowledge both prior to and after DuPre's crimes.

and just what their alleged connection problematical. It was not denied, however, that Geoghan was the recipient of the letter from DuPre, and Attorney Ernest G. Bentley, member of the Georgia legislature, who Thursday caused bond for $5,000 to be him a habeas corpus hearing, which will take place on Friday before Judge that Geoghan had at no time warned DuPre in any way or attempted to as the result of a friendly desire to help DuPre to abandon his criminal sisted on her participation in the latter.

She had known of the plan for the raid on the Kaiser store. More than that she had accompanied DuPre and two other confederates to the neighborhood of their exploit. The two had driven a speedster car to the front of the Peachtree Arcade as the bandit entered the store. Betty watched the entire operation from a coign of vantage in the Arcade.

She and the confederates saw the struggle and heard the shots as DuPre and Irby Walker, the detective, fought in the entrance for the possession of the diamond. They saw DuPre's dash into the Kimball house. Betty immediately hurried to her hotel. Bandit Declared Sober.

"The man who pulled that job was experienced," he declared. "He was calm and no more intoxicated than I am now, and I'm perfectly sober."

Solicitor Boykin repeated his statement that nothing less than the death penalty for the confessed slayer will be accepted, and said the prosecution for the state will offer no compromise, adding that any show of lentency would be a mockery of the laws of Georgia.

Georgia.

Unless some hitch occurs in the present plans of the solicitor, the trial will start next Tuesday, the solictree street to Decatur and then to Pryor and Wall streets, where DuPre was picked up according to prear-ranged plan and then hurried out Whitehall street until the downtown excitement died down.

Declarations that the interstate and intrastate rate structure in the south is not what it ought to be: that rate difficulties throughout the country are becoming more numerous cach year; that the existing railroad situation throughout the country is bad, but that "I am disposed to be optimistic about their future in this country," were made Thursday night by Joseph B. Eastman, member of the interstate commerce commission, at the annual banquet of the Atlanta Freight bureau in the Piedmont hotel. Mr. Eastman stated that he is in the south to make specific recommendations to the interstate commerce commission as to the amount of time and work necessary for the commission to investigate thoroughly the conditions of interstate rates in the south, and how those rates affect directly or indirectly intrastate rates. "I have differed with members of the I. C. C.," he said, "on the commission's authority and power over intrastate rates; but there was full agreement between all when I suggested that I investigate rates in the south. Will Urge Investigation. "In have found that the rate structure in the south is not what it ought to be, that interstate rates are not on a balance with intrastate rates, that the latter conflict with themselves. I will recommend to the commission that an investigation be ordered into class rates applicable to, from and within southern territory. I do not know whether or not the investigation will be ordered; the commission will

It seems that the difficulties are increasing in ratio with each year as it comes and goes. Last year the commission was presented with 1,200 formal rate cases; 900 formal finance matters; 70,000 informal complaints, and 240,000 letters were received. The commission during 1921 had 1,700 employees, 500 of whom were valuation workers.

"We need constructive relief to do away with complaints. It will be "The existing railroad situation is very bad throughout the United States; shippers and carriers are both complaining; we are trying to settle the question in a manner agreeable to both. But as for the future of the railroads, I am disposed to be opti-mistic. Prejudice is a cause of much of present and past complaints. I hope some day people will look at difficulties and questions from a scientific and not prejudiced viewpoint.

"There are some things which should be known and followed. First, that the railroads are primarily First, that the railroads are primarily public serving; second, that a railroad must have an operative capital in order to be efficiently operative; third, that a railroad, in order to be efficient, should have good and cooperative employees; and fourth, that the various railroads of the country should co-operate more. If such things were acknowledged and followed, things would get all right.

"As to the transportation act of 1920, I think history will say that it showed that the railroads, though mutually independent, are nationally dependent; that we are interested in fostering weak roads, as well as in fostering weak roads, as well as in fostering weak roads, and that co-operation between the railroads and between them and the people is necessary for a healthful condition of things."

Perry Praises Eastman.

Eastman was introduced before his address by James A. Perry, of the Georgia commission, who described him as "a man not only of efficiency, but of the courage of his convictions." Mr. Perry spoke of Atlanta as the Chairman Rosenbaum in his report said that 1921 was the most successful year in the history of the organization, and predicted that 1922 will be even more successful. He said that the organization was formed some 20 years ago, with less than 40 members, and that it now has a membership of more than 240. In speaking of the work of the bureau, he said that during 1921 it audited 84,025 freight bills; filed $16,801.85 in overcharge claims; adjudicated $25,850.97 in loss and damage claims; quoted 19,472 pates by telephone, quoted 22,756 rates by letter, making the total of quotations 42,226. He also praised the work of Harry T. Moore, secretary and traffic manager, and the work of the bureau during 1921 in rate cases and the fight it has successfully made in securing rate reductions. He also read a summary of the recent tentative order by the Georgia commission on class rates, to be found in another part of The Constitution.

It was the opinion of commissioners at Thursday's meeting that the recent tentative order by the Georgia commission on class rate is a constructive piece of work that deserves highest commendation and, it was the opinion of some commissioners, that other southern states would very likely adopt the proposed scale of Georgia rates.

During the discussion of the motion to name a committee to appear before the interstate commerce commission and ask for a reduction in all interstate rates, M. C. Moore, rate expert of the Mississippi commission, declared that the canners would profit as a result of rate raduction.

Before adjournment, Commissioner Tench moved the adoption of a resolution expressing appreciation shown the commissioners while in Atlanta. It was adopted unanimously. It was also decided to continue the organization with Atlanta as the best meeting place, because of its central location. Chairman Perry and the other state commissioners expressed delight over the meeting and its results.

Others at the meeting were J. T. Boifeuillet, of the Georgia railroad commission; E. M. Price, rate expert of the Georgia commission; B. H. Cooper, commissioner of Alabama; Commissioner Lee and W. G. Womble, rate expert of the North Carolina commission.

Reference has been made to the recent tentative order by the Georgia commission on class rates. The commissioners at Thursday's conference spoke of it as a constructive piece of work that deserves highest commendation, and Interstate Commence Commissioner Eastman advised other southern states to act at once as the Georgia commission has done in planning such revision of intrastate rates. The outstanding features of that fentative order, docket 15416, decided January 17, 1922, were summarized in the annual report of Harry T. The features of the tentative order are:

1. A. revision of the present road classification was considered, and the commission decided that the time had come when the railroads of the state, in so far as freight tariffs are concerned, should be divided into two classes only, to be designated as freight class A and B.

2. The commission condemned and held that the present busing point system was wrong in principle, and same was abolished.

3. The commission approved and adopted southern classification.

The foregoing departures from present rules, regulations and practices were announced in docket 12002. The shippers accepted these principles as being settled, and no objections were offered by shippers in the instant case.

4. The commission approved a class mile age scale for general application.

5. The commission for the first time fixed the percentage relations of the lower classes to first class. The percentage relationship being the same as adopted by the federal commission in I. & S. docket 1261.

Indeed, indications point to the fact that those responsible for the administration are still debating as to whether or not they are sufficiently "even with Wilson" to permit this country to assume its just obligation to the balance of the world and particularly to our former allies in the world war.

The world conference has been called for the explicit purpose of seeing if something cannot be done to stabilize conditions in Europe, thus to start the world once again on a quick-step for ward march.

To this end the United States is as much interested as any country in Europe; and, in many respects, more so.

As a result of the war and its aftermath this country has come into possession of more than one half of the world's gold supply, are deriving absolutely no benefit from it. On the other hand we are suffering from the jam.

The countries with which we deal, whose gold reserves have become exhausted and which have not enough printing presses from which to run off their fist currency, are in many respects better off than we are.

Official reports from Germany show that the factories of that country are operating on an 85 per sible phase of municipal improve cent of full time basis, with employment for everybody who is means of livelihood for breadwinwilling to work; and the whole country is working from sun-up to sun-down, six days each week. Here in our country, with more than half of the world's gold, business stagnates, and agriculture, which is the very basis of the prosperity of the nation, is at a lower ebb than for many years.

And yet, here we are haggling, debating, caterwauling as to be erected; a great viaduct to be hull: waterworks and sewer.

KEEP THIS WORK ALIVE.

That there is danger of the discontinuance or curtailment of the constructive activities of the Southern Settlement and Development organization is called to the attention of the public in a news account, elsewhere in The Constitution today, setting forth some of the handicaps under which this work is now being carried on.

For several years landowners and similar development associations in the various southern states-the Georgia Landowners' association, now the Georgia association, being one of them-have rendered invaluable service to the south in the way of developing the resources and improving rural conditions generally within their respective states.

These instrumentalities were of ganized by, and have operated as subsidiaries to, the Southern Settlement and Development organization; and from the parent institution each has received a large share of its financial support.

This organization has, in turn, peen financed mainly by the railroads serving the southern territory.

When the government took over the management and control of the railroads during the war this support was withdrawn by order of Director General McAdoo, and the organization would probably have. gone out of existence but for the generosity and public-spiritedness of its president, S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, who, during the time that his railroad was under government control, dug down into his own pocket to the extent of $30,000 that this splendid work might continue. Since the railroads were turned back to their owners the Southern Settlement and Development organization has exerted its efforts to induce them to renew their prewar contributions; but the only roads which have agreed to do so are the Seaboard and the Central of Georgia.

W. A. Winburn, president of the latter road, in announcing his willingness to continue the Central's co-operation said in a letter to President Warfield:

"I sincerely trust that you will be successful in your efforts to con-tinue the Southern Settlement and Development organization, as, in my opinion it is doing valuable work, and I am willing to contribute for account of the Central

This is creditable to President Winburn and to the Central and the example should be followed by every other carrier operating in the south.

A cessation of the remarkable work the organization is doing, to carry forward, would be little short of a calamity to the south!

Mr. Warfield truthfully says that "it would be a real loss to the south to permit this work to stop." What of the unequal fight? Every railroad in the south should do its share toward, not only keeping this movement alive. but toward enabling it to expand and increase its usefulness.

START TO WORK.

Savannah is taking aggressive steps to push forward every posment work in order to provide a ners who are out of employment. A year ago Atlanta voted a municipal bond issue of $8,850,000, every penny of which is to go into public improvements.

This bond issue was validated by the supreme court several months ago, but not a single unemployed man has as yet been given work as the result of the bond extensions to be made, all of which means work, work, work for thousands who are in distress from want

A certain amount of preliminary steps must be taken before the bond money can be applied to the purpose for which it was voted, but it is time that at least some

It is time that this bond money be put to service to the end that thousands of idle men in Atlanta may be given employment. Now, above all other times, in the midst of winter, is when those who are without jobs most need the assistance that the expendi ture of this bond money would make available.

Warfield Urges That Railroads Continue Development Work

Baltimore, Md., January 19.—Special.)—The Southern Settlement and Development organization, it was learned yesterday, will not receive the pre-war subscriptions from the railroads of the south. During the period of federal con-trol, S. Davies Warfield, president of the organization, supplied in the main the funds to continue its work to the extent of over $30,000. to the extent of over $30,000.

The announcement was made by Vice President Clement S. Ucker after a meeting of the executive committee of the organization, that only two railroads that agreed to renew their subscriptions were the Seaboard Air Line railway, of which Mr. Warfield is president, which continued its subscription and added thereto all during federal control, and the Central of Georgia railway, Mr. W. A. Winburn, president. Mr. Winburn, in a letter to Mr. Warfield, stated:

The Southern Settlement and Develfor account of the Central of Georgia.

The Southern Settlement and Development organization has been active in the development of the states of the gouth during the past ten years. Through its effort, and at considerable expense, associations of landowners were organized in the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Mississippi. Acting with them is the Southern Pine Cut. Over Land association, New Orleans. These associations are now operating with a large number of members, controlling many millions of acres of land. The organization has also been a forceful factor in the development of the livestock industry of the south. It has assisted in securing helpful state legislation for cattletick eradication, dog control laws, and other legislation looking to the protection and upbullding of the livestock industry. Being recognized as one of the foremost factors in southern development, the failure of the other rallroads to agree to subscribe to the support of this organization is a source of great regret.

The color and odor of tineture

'I reckon I'm gradually approaching that time of life when one's mind sets, for in spite of all the foregoing sets, for in spite of all the foregoing discouragements, I still like to believe that a dash of tincture of iodine upon every little cut, scratch, tear or abrasion offers a certain amount of security against infection of the wound and blood poisoning.

Aside from tincture of iodine, to my mind, there is no good excuse for keeping any other antiseptic substance than boric acid in the house or in the medicine cupboard. Any household in which such a poison as corresive sublimate (bichloride of mercury) or phenol (carbolic acid) are kept is constantly under peril of disaster, especially if children live or visit in the house. There is no legitimate use especially if children live or visit in the house. There is no legitimate use for either of these poisons by the laity. The laws should prohibit the possession of such deadly poisons by a layman. Horrible things happen to innocent children somewhere almost every day because irresponsible persons have these poisons in their homes. Another polson which laymen should not have in their possession is strychnine—a child killer which is swift and, when it is dispensed in sugar coated, or chocolate coated or pink pills or tablets, cruelly attractive to the cnrious child. For any real or legitimate purpose, strychnine has none in lay linds.

RANKS IN ATLANTA That the unemployment situation in Atlanta is better than during 1921, was disclosed Thursday afternoon in a statement by W. E. On the other hand, applications by men for positions, he said, have decreased.

In Mr. Hixon's report to the government on December 17, it was stated that there were 6,100 men out of jobs in Atlanta, while on January 8, when the last report was made, there were only 5,500 men out of jobs, a decrease in Atlanta's army of unemployed of 600. Pastor Will Denounce Maudlin Sentimentality In Cases of Murders

The moral lessons involved in the Dul're murder case will be forcefully set forth in a sermon Sunday night at the Baptist Tabernacle by the pas-tor, Rev. John W. Ham. He will speak upon true repentance and false repentance, and set forth in graphic style Biblical instances of false re-pentance in which men evidenced a great sorrow for wrong doing after they were caught up with and brought they were caught up with and brought to justice. The pastor says that he intends to show that maudlin sentimentality is doing much to lessen respect for the majesty of the law and is weakening the hands of the officials of the law in detecting criminals and bringing them to justice. He states he will also deal with female criminal and nals who aid and abet criminals in filching property and destroying lives filching property and destroying lives in order to get away with it.

"I propose," he said, "to deal unsparingly with the subject announced and take a firm position for the protection of life and property and the administration of even-tempered justice. Life has become so cheap in the minds of some people that they have no conscience on the subject and speak of it as 'boring' those who would stand in the way of their acts of robbery. The public needs to be saved from all of this sob stuff and let's get down to protecting society lrish question along the lines of the treaty is a process which requires let's get down to protecting society from future tragedies such as have been enacted recently."

held Wednesday evening, additional members were selected for the charter membership of the Atlanta chapter, and several applications were held over for further investigation. A special committee of three was appointed to investigate the matter of securing de-gree robes and regalia to be used by the chapter after its formal installadering his brother-in-law, Elmer P.

Jones, went to the jury this evening, following four hours devoted to arguments in the case.

The case was hard fought, the state endeavoring to show that the killing took place in the road some distance from the Davis home, while the defense endeavored to prove that Jones was advancing on Davis in the latter's yard and that Davis-shot to protect himself.

Testimony brought out during the trial showed that Jones was intoxicated at the time. Despite the fact that ther father, mother and other kin have been arrayed against her husband, Mrs. Davis has been standing staunchly by him during the trial.

ELECTS MEMBERS Approves Measure On Allied Debts

> Washington, January 19 .- Senate licans, in party conference, to day approved the allied debt refunding bill, with the addition of a provision that the interest rate on the refunded bonds should be not less than that axed in the Liberty loan acts authorizing the loans to the allied nations. This rate is 4 3-4 per cent, or 1-4 of fif per cent less than the rate stipulated in the obligations of the debtor pations now held by the treasury.

of the debtor nations now held by the treasury.

This was the only change in the bill as reported by the finance committee, and which the conference approved. It was announced that the vote on the added provision was 22 to 8, and was taken after the conference had voted down, 24 to 15, an amendment by Senator Smoot, of Utah, that the commission that is to conduct the refunding negotiations should not have the right to fix a rate of interest at less than 5 per cent.

Party leaders said it was the plan to take up the bill in the senate Monday and to press for its passage, the amended measure having been formally approved by the conference. The republicans already have voted to take up a soldier bonus bill as soon as the refunding measure is disposed of. It was said that there would be further party conferences to determine a policy as to the method of raising the necessary funds to finance the bonus.

Glowing Tributes Paid to Leaders Of "Lost Cause"

Followers of General Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson joined with sons and daughters of the war between the states in a celebration Thursday afternoon of the birthdays of these two immortal leaders in ceremonies held in the house of representatives' hall at the state capitol. Judge John S. Candler was orator of the day and he paid earnest tribute to the memory of General Lee, whose birth-day falls on January 19, and General Jackson, whose birthday anniversary is January 21.

Judge Candler delivered his inspiring address, old southern melodies were sung by the Kinghts Templar double quartet; crosses of honor were presented to six confederate veterans and the old soldiers themselves took charge of the program when the stirring strains of Dixie were played. The ceremonies were the most enjoyable yet given at this annual event and the largest crowd that has attended them in years was present. The big hall was filled to caracity while large crowds were seated in the balconies.

He then presented Judge Candler to the audience.

Judge Candler Speaks.

Judge Candler spoke eloquently of the leadership of Lee and Jackson. He reviewed the life of each of the generals and pictured the incidents in their lives which drew out the strongest parts of their natures. He declared that the south need never fear of what history will say about the leaders of the confederacy.

"No people, ancient or modern, can look with more pride to the verdict which history will be compelled to render upon the merits and characters of our leaders," Judge Candler said. "Most other leaders are great because of fortunate results and heroes because of success. Lee and Jackson, because of qualities in themselves, are great in the face of fortune and heroes in spite of defeat."

Judge Candler then praised the leadership of southern statesmen who m spite of defeat."

Judge Candler then praised the leadership of southern statesmen who were not engaged in military service whom he characterized as "public officers, without vices, private citizens without wrong, neighbors without reproach, Christians without hypocrisy and men without guile." He said they were gentle as women in life, modest and pure as virgins in thought, watchful as Roman vestals in duty; submissive to law as Socrates and as grand in battle as Achilles.

"One comfort the southern people and their children must have," Judge Candler continued, "whether constitutional government shall continue or fall; whether the states shall remain or be obliterated; whether liberty shall be seevered or die the death that done only by returning to the great principles for which we struggled. The general government must be restrained within the limitations of its constitutional delegated powers and the states restored to the unrestrained control of their domestic affairs under the reserved rights, or union states and liberty must perish. If this glorious work shall have success, then, the rejoicings of according states and happy millions from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the gulf, will syllable forever the hallelujahs of southern triumphs.

"But if blindness, madness, hate and ambition shall continue, further concentration of power at Washington be approved and principles of federal administration as now exercised continue, then the wail that shall come up from the universal wreck of union, states and liberty, and will drown the thunder in loud vindication of southern wisdom and fidelity. The graves of Lee and Jackson will become Meccas for journeying, sorrowstricken pilgrims of right for ages to come, and the future historian, reviewing the records you carefully shall have preserved, will write the last epitaph for the confederate dead—"These were the last heroes of freedom in America."

After Judge Candler had concluded

America."

After Judge Candler had concluded his speech, Judge Hillyer made a motion that it be printed and distributed. The motion was carried by a rising vote of approval.

Mrs. Perdue then announced that the United Daughters of the Confederacy are working in a movement to preserve "Arlington," the old home of General Lee, as a shrine for descendants of confederate soldiers. She declared that there has been some opposition in congress, but said the women of the confederacy would win in their plans.

After the presentation of the crosses to the veterans, the ceremonies were concluded.

VIRGINIA

PAYS TRIBUTE. Richmond, Va., January 19.—In Richmond and Virgina generally to-day was observed the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the birth of General Robert E. Lee, southern chieftain. OF LIFE INSURERS

S. M. Carson, local agent for the Mutual Life Insurance company, New York, was elected president of the Atlanta Association of Life Insurers Thursday afternoon at the annual meeting of the association in the Kimball house. Harry Davis, of the Massachusetts Life Insurance company, was elected vice president and W. F. Helms, of the Guardian Life Insurance company, re-elected secretary and treasurer. A resolution, expressing appreciation of W. E. Duncanson, president during 1921, was passed. President Carson was vice president last year. Julian V. Boehm presided at the meeting.

dent Carson was vice president last year. Julian V. Boehm presided at the meeting.

Tributes to Woodrow Wilson and General Robert E. Lee were other features of the meeting. Alfred C. Newell, in explaining the Wilson foundation movement and asking that subscriptions be made by the association members, said that Wilson's name will go down immortalised." Julian Boehm said that Wilson is "one of the greatest men of all times, and I hope his name will go down in history as such." Snbscriptions were taken up at the door.

Thomas Peters eulogized General Lee, and told of an incident during the Virginia campaign, when he was in Lee's army. The incident was that General Lee ate nothing but "corn in the shucks," just as the enlisted men did, and Mr. Peters said that that spoke volumes. "I haven't eloquence enough," he said, "to do justice to Lee's life and character, but I think it would be appropriate for us to stand in silence for a moment in memory to the great son of the south." Following which, everybody stood with bowed heads.

Following a report of the incorpora-

Old Soldiers Enter.

J. S. Dosier headed the column of old soldiers who marched from the lobby of the capitol to the hall upstairs. As commander of Camp 159, United Confederate veterans, he presided at the ceremonies. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. D. P. Cleveland. The musical program, carried out under the direction of Mrs. Charles Love, consisted of songs by the Knights Templar double quartet and musical numbers played by an orchestra furnished by the American Federation of Musicians led by Carl Karston and composed of Mrs. J. R. Braswell, C. E. Barber, C. L. Williams, Frank B. Zelie, C. Reynolds Clark and Carl Karston.

Mrs. John A. Perdue, head of the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, made a short speech preceding the presentation of the crosses of honor by Mrs. Hal Hentz. Those who received the crosses were Chaplain John A. Randolph, Fort McPherson, and N. L. Bennett, T. J. Buchanan, J. S. Puckett, George W. Smith and W. B. Willis. The ushers at the ceremony were members of the Margaret Wilson chapter, of the Children of the Confederacy.

Judge George Hillyer introduced Judge Candler. In a short speech Judge Hillyer paid tribute to the memory of General Lee and General Jackson, and reviewed some of the outstanding events in their careers. He then presented Judge Candler to the audience.

companies for the purpose of inaugurating a similar campaign on a national scale.

It was announced by Mr. Boehm that J. L. Shuff, president of the National Association of Life Insurers, will be in Atlanta on Februnary 6 as the guest of the local association, at a banquet at 12:30 o'clock in the Capital City club. Mr. Shuff who is general agent for the Union Central Life Insurance company, Cincinnati, Ohio, was postmaster of Cincinnati during the Wilson administration.

The executive committee of the association for 1922 was elected as follows: W. E. Hawkins, Tom Daniel. H. M. Willet, Frank W. Burr and Frank B. Lowe.

Banquet and Dance Given By Members of Old Guard

The annual banquet and dance given by the Old Guard, was an elaborate social affair of Thursday evening at the Capital City club.

Dinner was served at 8 o'clock. One large table for the officers was encircled by smaller individual tables for the guests. In the center of each was a wicker basket of red and white carnations. Seated at the large table were Governor and Mrs. Thomas W. Hardwick. Commandant and Mrs. Charles P. Byrd and the past commandants and their wives, including Colonel and Mrs. F. J. Paxon, Mr. and Mrs. Peter F. Clarke, Colonel nad Mrs. J. F. Burke, Mr. and Mrs A. McD. Wilson, George Napier and Captain John Murrell.

The ballroom was decorated in handsome flags and patriotic colors. Ferns and plams were effectively arranged in the corners of the room.

Following dinner, the election of officers took place, after which dancing was enjoyed, the musical program being rendered by Baisden's orchestra. Mrs. Hardwick wore a gown of irides and silver.

Mrs. Byrd wore a gown of irides or sequins, finished with a sash of orange-colored moire ribben.

Miss Gladys Byrd wore an imported moidel of lavender marquisstite combined with blue metal clota.

Mrs. Paxon's gown was of turquoise blue velvet; sequin-trimmed.

Mrs. Clarke wore green Georgette crepe, combined with cream lace and silver cloth.

Mrs. Burke's gown was of black satin, with overdraperies of tulle and jet.

Mrs. Wilson's gown was of white satin, with overdraperies of tulle and jet.

by the Kappa Alpha Alumni associa-tion of Atlanta in celebration of the birthday of General Robert E. Lee, the patron saint of the fraternity. Robert E. Lee is closely identified with the founding of this fraternity, his guiding hand at Washington and Lee university, where the order was founded, helped much to instill those lasting virtues of his in the ritual of the order, and whose ideals have had much to do with the prominent position that Kappa Alpha occupies in college fraternity circles. It is the custom of Kappa Alphas throughout the country to observe his birthday as their annual celebration day.

Elaborate Decorations. The ballroom of the club was elaborately decorated, palms, potted plants and flowers in the fraternity colors of crimson and yellow being used in profusion. Placed over the entrance to the ballroom and draped in the fraternity colors was a portrait of Robert E. Lee, and at the far end of the room, suspended over the fire-place, brilliantly lighting the ball-room, was the Kappa Alpha insignia, the tiny lights also in the colors off crimson and yellow.

Miss Grace Gates Becomes Bride Of Dr. Blackburn

The marriage of Miss Grace Lee Cates and Dr. John Davies Blackburn was quietly solemnized Wednesday afternoon, January 18, at 4 o'clock at St. Mark's Methodist church, in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. Dr. O. E. Wasson, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The altar was banked in palms, and plants forming a background for cathedral candelabra, burning white tapers.

Annie Munger Meuller played Mrs. Annie Munger Meuller played several selections on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Hoke, organist, who rendered the wedding march. The bride was lovely in a tailored suit of blue, with trimmings of beaver. Her taffetta hat was a becoming spring model. She wore a corsage of orchids and valley lilies.

Dr. Blackburn and his bride left immediately for Birmingham and Chattanooga and, after February 1, will be at home at 110 East Fourteenth street.

Dr. Lomax, of the University of Texas, is completing a tour of many eastern cities. He occupies a unique place in American literature. As a college boy at Harvard he wrote for one of his classes a theme on the life and songs of the western cowboy, in which he brought out the fact that these ballads had never been written and that as a different civilization took possession of the west, they would eventually die out.

His work was so well done that he attracted the attention of the faculty which won for him the Sheldon Fellowship for the Investigation of American Ballads. He went back home to Texas and made his collection of cow-

Why do we dread old age so? Are there no things worth doing that one can do when one has passed the active years? What is it we are so terribly afraid of in old age?

To answer my last question first, I have an idea that one thing we greatly fear is not being needed. We have all seen older people whom nobody needed. They were treatd kindly but they knew that they were not neces-

It seems to me that the surest specific against this kind of loneliness is to become necessary to yourself. Maybe that is an awkward way of putting what I want to say. What I mean is this-to cultivate resources witht yourself which will make you such a good companion for yourself that you will not be entirely dependent on the companionship of others.

There Can Be Fun in Looking On. It is inevitable that as one grows older one must do more looking on and less joining in the pageant. One's joys become less often the joys of sensation and more often the joys of thought. Now many people, instead of cultivating the joys that are pos-sible to advancing years, try desper-

> Just As We Enjoy the Theater. The change in the forms of pleasure that are natural and possible as one passes from middle life into the later years is something like the change in regard to the theater that one who goes a great deal is sure to pass through. At first one's joy in the theater is almost entirely an emotional joy. One is made to feel the motions that the actors are simulating. By and by, however, one comes to take a different kind of pleasure in the theater; one realizes it is an art. one appreciates all the intricate skill in the making of the play and in the acting of it. One cannot lose oneself as thoroughly as at first, and vet the pleasure in its way is just as great.

I think everyone who is approaching the middle years ought to ask himself if he is cultivating this more lasting form of enjoyment, and see that the answer is in the affirmative.

Canby's eyes held hers.
"You're sure of that?"
Jeanne laughed.
"Speak for yourself! I'll try to remember to ask Mr. Barstowe for his opinion the very next time I see him?" Canby merely grunted a reply.

Canby Proves Persistent.

"What did that Dayton giri mean by giving Barstowe your love?"

Again Jeanne shrugged.

Jeanne shook her head and began to draw on her gloves.
"I had tickets myself—Signor Bonnicetti sent them to me, but I gave them to Alicia Forbes."
"Bonnicetti's good. Better let me get seats," persisted Canby.
But Jeanne was guided by some sixth sense which urged her to return home.

me.
"Sorry, but I have an appointment shorty, but I have an appointment at my modiste's," she fibbed, choosing the lair least likely to be penetrated by masculine escort. She knew that, assured as Canby was of her indepen-dence, he would hardly risk accom-dence, he would hardly risk accompanying any girl to a modiste's.

He took her to the door of Madame Julie's, however, and Jeanne was forced to go meekly, inwardly chafing at the delay, as his car made slow progress through the traffic. She bade Canby a hasty goodgye and vanished into the shop until his car had disappeared in the distance. Then she hurrled out, signalling a taxi—but not before Madame Julie had tempted her with a French creation which had just come in, and she had fallen. It was priced a good deal higher than the amount of the cheque Canby had given her to complete her winnings on the stock investment; but Jeanne told herself that she must save no expense to impress the Barstowe family with her desirability as a prospective daughter-in-law.

daughter-in-law.

daughter-in-law.

Just in Time.

When she entered her sitting room, she blessed her sixth sense, for her telephone was ringing; and, when she took down the receiver, it was Victor Barstowe's voice that greeted her.

"This is the first moment I've had to ring you up today, sweetheart," he explained. "Mother and Vera and the French girl have gone to Bonnicettl's concert, and I'm to join them later; but I had to have a moment with you. If you're not busy, may I drop in for half an hour."

Jeanne was thinking rapidly. He had made no mention of luncheon—yet it was impossible that Vera had not told him about seeing her with Canby.

not told him about seeing her with Canby.

She also suspected that the reason he had not called hear earlier that day was because he had been going through an accounting with his parents—with his mother, at least!

"So sorry." Jeanne reached a decision quickly, "but I, too, am going to Bonnicetti's concert. He sent me complimentary tickets."

She had lied to Canby about sending the tickets to Alicia Forbes. She HAD meant to, but now she was glad that she had deferred her generous action.

It would be good policy for her to be seen by Mrs. Baratowe and Vera Dayton at the fashionable concert in the heat seats the house provided.

"Great! Then I can come and get you and we'll all have tea together afterward," Barstowe said the very thing Jeanne wanted him to. "Be around in ten minutes and drive you over to the theater."

Jeanne dressed quickly. She had a new velvet afternoon gown which was just the thing, and she was about to send downstairs to the florist's for a corsage bouquet, when one of the bellboys came up with a green paste-board box.

Once opened, it revealed a wondrous bouquet of mauve orchids with Bur-stowe's name scrawled on a card in an unfamiliar hand. He had evidently phoned the hotel florist's as soon as she had rung off.

He came up to her apartment when he arrived, instead of waiting for her in the lobby. Jeanne raised her lips gingerly to meet his kiss.

"Careful of my powder and lip rouge," she warned.

He laughed and kissed her without regard for such artificialities, holding her close and burying his face after-ward in her soft scented hair. 'When are you going to marry me?"

She drew away and looked at him she drew away and looked at him with grave eyes. "Never—unless your family is will-ing."

He evaded her eyes and dragged out a cigarette and lighted it. "Dont' let that worry you! Dad's "Dont' let that worry you! Dad's crazy about you already—but you know mothers! It takes a little while for them to adjust themselves to the idea of losing the son of the family. Daughters are another matter. But don't you bother your beautiful head. There was the light of battle in her eyes, and her fierce, indominatable will was never more in the ascendant. She would win! She must!

Fifteen minutes later she was being seated in a box at the Bonnicetti concert. Barstowe was beside her. He had determined to divide his time between her box and his mother's, which was directly opposite.

Really, we are tired of the canoe-haped neckline. It has been with us s long as any one settled feature of fashion ever dared to remain. When it first arrived we said it was for the minority. We felt assured, and had every reason for our conviction, that the vast majority of women could not hope to retain or achieve beauty with such a trying and hazardous decolletage. Every one thought that the experiment was doomed to failure.

What is the end of all our prophecies? A world-wide acceptance of the neckline and a continuance of it throughout all argument. Nothing the dressmakers have said or done con-vinced or persuaded women to cut their frocks any other way at the neck. Did the trade cater to this verdict? Was, it because so many thousands of frocks were turned out by machinery in our well-known and reckless manner that the world ceased to expect a change? Women settled down to regard this kind of opening at the neck as one of the essentials of dress, something running on sched-ule and not subject to change, even as the sun and stars.

Recently those who change the structure of clothes have been roused to action in this department of dress. They insist that their occupation will be gone if women continue to accept a standardized uniform, consisting of a slip-on gown without curve or fit, months, has come to pass. For four years women have been able to wear the same kind of frock and hat without causing their neighbors to say they had lost their money. Are the economists glad? Strange to say, one has no beard a peep from them. Why? Because they found out that human nature is the same. New clothes were bought as frequently under the new method of making clothes as under the old. The purse was emptied as quickly as it was when the skirts and bodices took on new airs every other month. One hopes they are satisfied with their effort to make humanity otherwise than it is, putting the blame where it didn't belong.

When women go to buy new clothes this mid-season they are persuaded into a different kind of decolletage than what has prevailed for four years. You must be diagonal, say the dressmakers to the public. The drapery of one-piece frocks goes across and downward, and the neckline follows this new development. The sketch shows one of the methods of getting it right. The frock is in electric green crepe, one of the new colors for the spring, a charming one to bring out in consonance with nature. The skirt keeps to the traditional method of obe taining fulness at each hip, but the long-waitsted bodice departs from the straight path and crosses the body in two lines, then wrinkles down to the hips. This diagonal decolletage is usually attractive on every woman and it is not difficult for the middle-great It lends dignity and it does not be a success the success of the success of the middle-great It lends dignity and it does not be a success of the success of the middle-great It lends dignity and it does not be a success of the success of the middle-great It lends dignity and it does not be a success of the success of the middle-great It lends dignity and it does not be a success of the succes usually attractive on every woman and it is not difficult for the middle-aged. THE HOUSEHOLD Edited by Anne Rittenhouse

WHEN YOU BUY TABLE LINEN. Midwinter is the time when it is usually most economical to buy table linens and now that the price of such things is down in many cases to pre-war level it is a good plan to begin to fill up the gaps caused by high prices that prevailed during and di-rectly following the war. There is never an economy in letting your linen supply run down, unless of course prices are too high, as they were during the war.

Aiways bear in mind that napkins get harder wear than tablecloths. Bear in mind that while a tablecloth may be used for more than one meal, napkins are usually sent to the laundry, and that therefore they receive more frequent washings. So even if you have a small family it is well to get a dozen napkins to go with the cloth. You will find that if you have a fam-ily of four that your napkins and cloths will wear out at about the same time if you get twelve napkins for each cloth. If you have a very large family then it is best to get a dozent and a half or two dozen napkins with to use always the same design of damask so that it doesn't really matter, whether the cloth and napkins wear equally. It is a good idea to have a style of damask for ordinary wear, having a more expensive, heavier damask for special occasions. For ordinary use you will find that the size known as "breakfast napkin," which is twenty-two inches square, is the best selection. Dinner size, which is from twenty-four to twenty-seven inches square, however, should be se-lected to go with your special occa-sion cloths. In setting the table for a formal dinner party the large napkins are preferable.

Always take the measurements of your table before investing in table-cloths, and remember that a different sort of cloth should be selected for the square and round table, or for a table that is usually an oblong or

THE OLD MAN'S BIRTHDAY.

THE OLD MAN'S BIRTHDAY.

Ted looked at himself solemnly in the glass and wondered if he looked as old as he felt. He was a year older today than he was yesterday. He decided it was time to be settling down and looking dignified.

"Good morning, kid," greeted his older brother.

"I wish you'd stop calling me that," said Ted.

"Oh, I forgot," his brother grinned.
"You're having a birthday, arent' you? Bet you think old Methusalah had nothing on you."

"Why don't you have some of your pals over and play some games or something?" suggested Marion, his sister.

"The fellows I go with don't like parties," he answered with dignity.

Marion's eyes twinkled. After breakfast Ted noticed his sister and his mother with their heads together. Then Marion speat a long time at the phone, but he didn't think much about it at the time.

Ted came home from school that afternoon and went up to his room to start a new book he had received for his birthday. About dinner time he heard someone coming up the walk, and he glanced out. An old man, leaning on a cane, was coming in. While Ted was wondering where he had seen the man before, Marion called for him to come down.

"I have invited some of your old friends over for dinner," she said, gravely. "I have given them easy chairs in the living room. Come in."

Ted followed her. He entered the room. His eyes widened. There were six old men with flowing beards and canes. Then Ted recognized Stubby Aiken behind the cotton beard of the old man nearest him. Ted grinned.

"Your friends were just telling some of their experiences when they were young," said Marion. Ted sat down, and each one in turn told some story of his "youth." A prize was given for the best story. After awhile the dining room door was opened, and the boys forgot their age as they serambled to the fenst. They all voted the "old man party" a big success, and Ted decided he wasn't so old after all.

"Why don't you get up an orchestra and give 'em some music?" Al suggested.

"But none of us play a thing," said Ethel. "How can we give any?"

"Easy," replied Al, and went on to explain how each of the four girls could make an instrument of her own and learn to play in no more than three or four hours' time.

Ethel's Paper Whistle.

Ethel's Paper Whistle. Figure 1 shows how she did it. A concave cut was made in two pieces of thin wood. The pieces were fitted together with a strip of writing paper between. By putting the whistle between her teeth and blowing through the opening she made a most weird sound. "Practice a little," said Al, "and you'll be able to get real tunes out of it."

Marilyn Fox made a bottle flute. She attached eight bottles of various sizes to a strip of cardboard with pieces of heavy string, as shown in figure 2. The bottles were arranged in graduated order, running from the smallest bottle to the largest. The necks of the bottles were allowed to extend a little above the edge of the cardboard. By holding the card clse to the lower lip and blowing into the bottle while aliding the card back and forth a really musical sound is obtained. "Some flute," laughed Marilyn.

Bottle Flute. Bottle Flute.

But equally as novel as the bottle flute was Beatrice Minn's rubber band harp. She placed a number of brads in the two long edges of a deep cigar box. Then, over these little nails she stretched rubber bands of various sizes, placing the thickest bands at one end of the box and gradunting them to the other end.

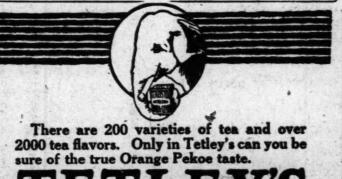

In order to stretch the bands sufficiently to make them hum when picked with the chicken feather quill, the bands were stretched over two nails on each side of the box.

It didnt' take Beatrice long to learn how to pick out favorite tunes on her harp. flute was Beatrice Minn's rubber band

And, of course, there was the old familiar comb-and-tissue-paper instrument. Figure 5 shows how the tissue paper is placed over the teeth of the comb. By holding the comb to your lips, which must be parted slightly, and humming into the instrument, a sound not at all displeasing can be produced. Toots Clarke chose this instrument as hers.

For several evenings before Stunt. Night, the four girls practiced together on their instruments. Tunes that they were to play on Stunt Night were decided upon and rehearsed thor-

Once a rarity, is now to be observed and admired upon every hand. Indeed, no other woman can flourish long in the midst of this modern, complicated life. In the home, in business, in social life, the woman who is serene and confident wins, while the nervous, flustered individual wastes her talents and gets nowhere. Of course, poise is dependent mainly upon sound health and steady nerves. If you feel that you are being kept back in this way, why not turn to that great woman's remedy, Lydia E. furniture that any house can own is a full length mirror. It is not vanity entirely which induces a woman to look into a mirror. It is an earnest and commendable desire to improve her personal appearance. The man who was father to six young daughters had the right idea when he had long mirrors set all over his house so that his girls could scarcely go into any room without being able to see themselves from head to toe. He understood psychology. He knew that the girls would grow up holding themselves properly and wearing their clothes well, if their faults of walking and standing were always evi-

If you do not like a great many mirrors in your room, a splendid idea is to have one hanging on the inside of your closet door. Incidentally this is an economical idea for a good quality full-length mirror with beveled edges and even the plainest wood frame cost quite a bit of money.

But it is perfectly practical to pur chase a piece of glass 4 1-2 feet by 2, which can be hung in the cheapest frame on the inside of the closet door, which will give you a full-length re flection of yourself; 41-2 feet, by the way, is no where near a grown woman's size, but if you hang the mirror with its top at the level of your head, you will have no difficulty in seeing your feet and all your figure when you stand a few feet away from it. Such stand a rew teet away from it. Such a mirror would not cost very much. U. D. C. Chapter Unveils Marker At Agnes Scott

Decatur, Ga., January 19 .- (Spe cial.)—One of the most impressive incidents in connection with the observance of Lee's birthday in Decatur today was the unveiling of a granite memorial of the engagement of Wheeler's cavalry and the federal troops in the battle of Atlanta, which took in the battle of Atlanta, which took place July 22, 1864.

This imposing granite boulder was erected on the Agnes Scott college campus, which was the scene of the beginning of this memorable engagement in Decatur.

The memorial was erected by the Agnes Lee chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, aided by patriotic friends, as one of a number of similar memorials which the chapter is raising to make historic spots in and about Decatur.

The exercises took place Thursday afternoon at 12:20 o'clock in the Agnes Scott chapel. Scott Candler acted as gracious master of ceremonies, introducing Charles D. McKinney, who delivered a stirring and enthusiastic address. Mr. McKinney paid a glowing and eloquent tribute to General Lee, to Wheeler and his brave men and to the women of the south who are endeavoring so loyally to perpetuate their greatness.

After the address patriotic songs were sung and the audience adjourned to the grounds in front of the college, where the memorial was unveiled by little Miss Elizabeth Scott, of Scottdale, Ga. Little Elizabeth is the

After the first burst of speed, Bard resigned himself to follow Sally, knowing that he could never catch her, first because her horse carried a burden so much lighter than his own, but above all because the girl seemed to know every rock and twist in the trail, and rode as courageously through the night as if it had been broad day, Where's he gone to shoot in the back? Where's when at length they arrived at the old house of Drew, they had been far less than five hours on the way, yet his long detour to the south had given him three days of hard riding to cover the same points.

went directly through the door of the house.

He heard the crazy floor creak beneath her weight, the saddle dropped with a thump; a match scratched and a flight of shadows shook across the doorway. He unsaddled, and carried the saddle into the room. He found Sally crouched at the fire and piling bits of wood on the rising flame. At his coming she smled briefly up at him and turned immediately back to the fire. The silence of that smile brought their comradeship sharply home to him. It was as if she understood his weariness and knew that the fire was infinitely comforting.

He sat on one of the bunks, and when she took her place on the other the studied her covertly, with side I he studied her covertly, with side glances, for he was beginning to feel strangely self-conscious. She turned, observed him. Her chin rested on her hands, now, so that when she spoke her head nodded a little and gave a significance to what she said. "The gray doesn't belong to you?"

"No."
"Hoss-lifting," she mused. "Who'd you drop, Bard?"
"The one they call Calamity Ben."
"Is he done for?"
"Yes."
"In a couple of hours we'd better ride on."

"I don't intend to ride on."

She turned squarely on the bunk and faced him. "You're going to hit the trail in an hour, understand?"
"If I do, it will be to ride back toward Drew."

ward Drew."

Her lips parted to make an angry retort, and then he watched her steel herself with patience, like a mother teaching an old lesson to a child.

"Follow me close, Bard. If you don't do what I say I'll cut loose and teave you alone here." He made no reply, and after a moment she said:

"That sounds like quittin' cold on you. I won't do it unless you try some fool thing like riding back toward Drew."

"Don't you see that the last thing I want is to keep you with me. A girl's reputation is a fragile thing, Sally."

"Meaning that they'd talk about me! Bard, they've already said enough Bard, they've already said enough things about me to fill a book—notes and all, with a bunch of pictures thrown in. What I can't live down I fight down, and no man never says the same thing twice about me. It ain't healthy. If that's all that bothers you, close your eyes and let me deal you out of this mess. I guess we can stay here tonight without no danger. And in the morning—well, the morning can take care of itself. I'm going to turn in."

He rose obediently and stood at the door facing the night. From behind

She was lying on her side, facing the sensed beneath the heavy blanket. He slipped into his own bunk and lay watching the heavy drift of shadows across the ceiling. He strove to think, but the waves of light and dark blotted from his mind all except the feeling of her nearness.

She flushed, and her heart bear loudly to hear his weakness. He was thinking aloud; she felt that the bars between them were down again.

In the first place, I went because I had to be seen and known by name in some place far away from you.

He turned to the wall and shut his eyes. For a time he dared not move. He was feeling for himself like a man who fumbles his way down a dark pasof her nearness. who fumbles his way down a dark passage dangerous with obstructions. All as knew was an overpowering will to see her. He turned, inch by inch, little degree by degree, knowing that if, when he turned, he looked into her eyes, the end would rush upone them, overwhelm them, carry them along like straws on the flooding river. At last ais head was turned, he looked.

She lay on her back smiling as she slept. One arm hung down from the bunk and the graceful fingers thailed, nalm up, on the floor, curling a little, as if she had just relaxed her grasp on something. And down past her shoulder, half covering the whiteness of her arm, fled the torrent of brown hair, with the firelight playing through it like a sunlit mist.

Finally he rose, and dressed with the firelight playing through it like a sunlit mist.

"Trew?"

"Yes. It all worked like a charm. I went to the house of Jerry Wood. told him my name, stayed there until tonk her arrived hunting for me, and then gave them the slip."

She did not look up from her occupation, which was the skilful cleaning of her gun.

"There's no changing you." She did not wait for his answer. "I know that, I won't ask questions. If it has to be done we'll do it quickly; and afterward I can find a way out for us both."

They saddled and took the trail which pointed up over the mountains—the same trail which they had ridden in an opposite direction the night with the firelight playing through it like a sunlit mist.

Finally he rose, and dressed with caution, for he knew that he must go at once. He stooped and smoothed down the blankets of his bunk, for no trace of him must be seen if any other man should come during the night. He would go far away—see and be seen—spart from Sally Fortune. He picked up his saddle and stole step by step across the floor, to the door, to the night.

CHAPTER XXII.

It was not long after the departure of Bard that Sally Fortune awoke. For a step had cracked on the floor, and she looked up to find Steve Nash standing in the center of the room with the firelight gloomily about him; behind, blocking the door with his squat figure, stood Shorty Kilrain.

"Where's your side-kicker?" asked Nash. "Where's Bard?"
And looking across the room, she was that the other bunk was emity. She raised her arms quickly, as if to wiffle a yawn, and sat up in the bunk.

rushing pressure.

"You demon; you she-devil!"

She whiried out of the bunk, the blanket caught about ser like the toga of some ancient Roman girl, and as she moved she had swept up something heavy and bright from the floor.

All this, and still his grip was on her left arm.

"Drop your hand, Nash."
He threw her from him and stood snarling like a dog growling for the bone it feared to touch because there may be poison in the taste.
"If I wrung that throat of yours," he said, "I know I couldn't get out of your where he's gone."

"Because I dont' know, you see."

"Don't know?"

"He's given me the slip."

"That's another lie."

She watched him with a strange, sneering smile. Then she stepped sneering smile. Then she stepped close.

"I'll tell you what ought to make you happy. He don't care for me no more than I care for—you. Steve. I threw myself at him. I dunno why I'm tellin' you, except it's right that you should know. But he don't want me; he's gone on without me."

"An' you like him still!"

She merely stared, with a sick smile.

They rode off at a slow trot, like men who have resigned themselves to a long journey, and Sally watched them from the door. Then she went back to her bunk.

back to her bunk.

No tears were in her eyes; they were wide and solemn, looking up to the shadows of the ceiling.

She woke with the smell of frying bacon pungent in her nostrils. What she saw was Anthony Bard kneeling by the coals of the fire over which by the coals of the fire over which steamed a coffee-pot on one side and a pan of crisping bacon on the other. The vision shook her so that she rubbed her eyes and stared again to make sure. It did not seem possible make sure. It did not seem possible that she had actually wakened during the night and found him gone, and with this reality before her she was strongly tempted to believe that the coming of Nash was only a vivid dream.

"Morning, Anthony."

He turned his head quickly and smiled to her.

"Hello, Sally."

He was back at once turning the bacon, which was done on the first side. Seeing that his back was turn-ed, she dressed quickly.

"How'd you sleep?"
"Well."

He turned more slowly this time.
"You woke up in the middle of the night?

"Yes."

"What wakened you?"

"Nash and Kilrain."

He sighed: "I wish I'd been here."

She answered: "I'll wash up; we'll eat; and then off on the trail. I've an idea that the two will be back, and then" As he finished his coffee he said, staring into a corner: "I don't know why I came back to you, Sally."

"You didn't mean to come back

"Of course not."

He caught the unmistakable glint of the morning light on steel, and he turned the gray sharply. At the same time a rattling blast of revolver shots crackled above them; the gray reared and pitched back.

By inches he escaped the fall of nip with him.

> "Isn't that wonderful stuff!" he ejaculated. "Ten-year-old cognac. A friend in Atlantic City sent father a half dozen bottles of it. We just go kids.'

One by one, excepting for the Larrimore and Hennessy brothers and sisters, the girls and boys danced up the steps of the Hampden porte-cochere to greet Jeanette. Some of the boys were in dinner coats. All of the girls were radiantly bare about the arms and shoulders; and their flimsy little party skirts were as short, probably, as their ages warranted, yet the shortness had a deliberate audacity.

owners do queer things. Hawkes, for instance, is considered one of the fastest youngsters in baseball. To say he ever has had a fair chance to show whether he is of full major league caliber is a joke. He may not be, but he was not given a chance to develop fully. Half the clubs in the major leagues are weeping and claiming that their pitching corps would be better, yet Gonzales, one of the smartest catchers in the land and a fine fellow working with pitchers, is practically benched by the Giants, kept largely in idleness, traded to Cincinnati and shunted out to St. Paul. Not the greatest catcher in the world, perhaps, but the dope figures show that he ranks in the first fifteen in the National league, and perhaps, with regular work, would be better. The pitchers who have worked with him like to do so because he steadies them and shows fine generalship.

Of course, such changes are necessary, but there is a mystery in methods by which young, or promising, or still good ball players, can be waived out of the big leagues is order to facilitate trades. There are several clubs that could use Gonzales profitably; almost any major club could use Hawkes. If the swarm of players being ware road or a large trade of the sum of the young men in football and the development of the young athlete in China.

"PETITION."

Buck Weaver is petitioning for reginstatement in organized baseball. He has laid his plea before Judge Landis, and asked that he be restored to good standing. He claims entire innocence, and says in the same breath that he was approached with inducements to throw the world's series, that he knew others were approached, that he was in doubt as to what to do, and decided to keep quiet, and double-cross the crooks.

Atlanta will get its first taste of real soccer football in many moons Saturday afternoon at Grant field. The Lithonia eleven, which took the local club into camp a few weeks ago by a narrow margin, is coming in to match wits and feet with the Atlanta societies. The game, will be called at 3:30, and since no admission fee will be charged, a good sized crowd is expected to be on hand. Lithonia has a well balanced aggregation, composed of a number of players who saw service in the old Georgia Cup league, which flourished before the war. Captain Jack Harlan, of the Atlanta team, has had only a small nucleus of experienced players to build a team on, but recent workouts indicate that the squad is fully capable of giving a good account of itself. Members of the squad will meet at Spaldings' tonight at 5:30 to get their regular uniforms.

An all-round good show that is ranking high in the esteem of Atlanta picture-going people is the bill at the Criterion this week with Lionel West in person and Lionel West in pictures, taking off the honors. Departing from the established precedent in his personal appearance engagement at the Metropolitan, Lew Cody is putting on a genuinely good act, one that could easily find a place in the big time vaudeville, and one, by that same token, that is going over with tremendous success. For more than fifteen minutes he holds the audience fascinated with his art. Bert Lytell is pleasing generally in his latest offering. Abuse Alleged.

Much testimony relating to alleged abuse of enlisted men cropped out again today, along with further reference to the conduct of "Hard Boiled" Smith. Two former service men testified they had seen three public executions at Is-Sur-Tille, at which station war department records showed only two men were hanged.

Although the temperature for Friday morning was slated to be around 25 degrees, according to the government weather bureau forecast, at midnight Thursday night no change in the weather was noticed.

As stated in a press dispatch, a cold wave bearing snow swept eastward from the Bocky mountains Thursday, resulting in the coldest weather known in the northwestern states since 1909. In many of the western states the temperature is said to be below freezing. More moderate temperatures were recorded at the southern stations, the weather bureau reported.

Declaring the movement has received a great impetus in the last year, officials said that an application was pending from a big cotton warehouse in New Bedford, Mass., with a capacity of over 100,000 bales, to come in under the federal act. This was said to be the first one received from the cotton mill section of New England. Others there, however, have approached the department for information on requirements of the federal law, it was said. Rome, Ga., January 19.—(Special.) C. E. McLin, former general manager of the Anchor Duck mills, this city, has asked the Rome Chamber of Commerce to secure $35,000 additional stock subscriptions for a new cotton mill enterprise which he is promoting. He has already raised $115,000 in stock and wants an additional $150,000.

Officials of the department believe that absence of federal grades for io-bacco has been responsible for only Mr. McLin proposes to manufacture specialties. Ground will be broken for the new plant, which is to be located at Atlanta Junction, just outside the city limits, when the weather will permit. The chamber officials have assured Mr. McLin that the stock will be raised, and the industrial comhacco has been responsible for only five tobacco warehouses so far complying under the federal law. The department is now working on tentative tobacco grades, and when this work is completed it is the opinion of those doing the work that the tobacco industry will join the cotton, grain and wool interests in seeking benefits of the warehouse act. will be raised, and the industrial com-mittee, headed by F. farm reserves of wheat, less spring seed requirements, suggested a total of 110,000,000 bushels. Allowing for average bread requirements, this would mean a shortage of 80,000,000 bushels July 1, except for mill and country elevator stocks.

Moreover, department of agriculture reports current today indicated that European countries might be expected to continue buying wheat freely in the world's markets, and there were predictions that a new decrease in the United States visible supply would be announced on Monday. Sale of Southern Bonds Reflects Credit to South

Atlanta brokers and others who keep in close touch with the curity market point to the phenomenally quick sale of the thirty million dollar issue of Southern Railway company six and a half per cent development and general mortgage bonds as proof not only of the strong credit position of Southern Railway company itself but as an indication of the faith which investors have in the south as a field

These bonds were offered through J. P. Morgan & Co., Tuesday morning, but so quickly were they gobbled up that the subscription books were immediately closed with the announcement that the issue had been largely oversubscribed.

From the proceeds of the bonds, the Southern Railway company will be able to take care of the $22,000,000 of short term notes it has falling due, a debt of something over $2,000,000 to the War Finance corporation for funds advanced during the period of federal control, and all of its floating debt.

This will leave the Southern Railway company's treasury in the easiest position it has known in years with no large maturities in the near future. The device of making the four per cent bonds marketable by simply adding a promise to pay an additional two and a half per cent proved an entire success and bond men were of the opinion this is one of the shrewdest moves recorded in years. It is pointed out that the Southern still has in its treasury some fifty million dollars of these bonds, covering improvements made out of earnings in the past, which bonds can now be marketed as funds for improvements are needed.

The net operating income of the Southern railway during November was the largest in years, according to reports just issued to the interstate commerce commission. Net for that period totaled $2,866,608, as compared with $368,037 in November, 1920, $965,981 during the same month in 1919 and $906,405 in November, 1918.

These figures brought net operating income for eleven months ending November 30 up to $12,165,834, as compared with $14,538,711 during the previous corresponding period, $8,918,114 the same period two years ago and $27,079,994 the corresponding period in 1918. November gross of the road was more than $11,159,000—largest in the last three years, except in 1920, when the total was more than $12,683,000. ross for the eleven months was in excess of $118,210,000

The general market closed steady at a net advance of 2 to 13 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 2 points on December, but generally 6 to 11 points lower, owing to weak Liverpool cables and unfavorable reports from the cotton goods trade, where buyers were said to be holding off for a possible revision in prices. There was some scattered southern selling as well as further liquidation, and active months soon showed net losses of 16 to 20 points with January selling at 17.50 and May at 17.10.

Offerings became lighter as soon as the initial selling orders had been executed, however, and the market firmed up during the middle of the morning on the continued better character of the spot news from the south. The buying was stimulated later by reports that private ginning returns indicated only 7,904,000 bales ginned up to January 16, or 20,000 bales for

Brokers who were credited with selling heavily for western and Wall street accounts earlier in the week were active buyers on the midday advance, which carried January up to 17.85 and May to 17.52, or 19 to 24 points net higher. The covering then slackened and later fluctuations were irregular, with the close showing reactions of 9 to 10 points from the best. Both Liverpool and the continent were credited with buying here early. In the case of Liverpool this was supposed to represent a transfer of short hedges from New York to the English market, while the continent was believed to be covering short contracts, or buying late month hedges against prospective needs. Brokers who were credited with

The ginning privately reported of 20,000 bales for the first half of January was compared with 98,000 the previous low record for the period ginned from the crop of 1916. Port receipts today, 29,035; United States port stocks, 1,248,141. Exports, 23,578, making 3,219,960 so far this season.

GAINS ARE MADE

AT NEW ORLEANS Yew Orleans, January 19.—Private bureau forecasts of small ginning started an upward movement in the price of cotton today, causing a rapid and fairly wide advance following a period of shakiness and lower prices in the early trading. From declines below yesterday's close of 11 to 17 points there was a rise to advances over yesterday's close of 20 to 26 points, and March first falling off to 16.47 and then advancing to 16.90. The close was at net gains on the ession of 12 to 17 points, with March it 16.81.

According to reports circulated in ession of 12 to 17 points, with market at 16.81.

According to reports circulated in his market a southern bureau counting inning to January 16 at only 7. 14.000 bales, which would mean a poduction for this last period of only bout 20,000 bales. Which would mean a poduction for this last period of only bout 20,000 bales. The effect of these figures was ingreased by the figures on weights of ales furnished to congress by the ensus bureau, the average weight from the first of the season to December 1 being only 496.3 pounds. An Atlanta bond house, J. H. Hilsman & Co., has bought the $350,000 issue of Lowndes county 5 per cent road bonds at a premium, according to a dispatch received from The Constitution's Valdosta correspondent yesterday. The bonds are full direct obligations of Lowndes county authorized by a vote of the people and projected by a direct unlimited tax on all the property in the county, both real and personal, with an assessed valuation in 1921 of more than $14,000,000.

000,000. Lowndes county, located in the south central part of the state, contains 304,640 acres of land in the center of the richest long staple cotton section in the world. Lowndes county produces the highest grade of tobacco grown, also 70 to 100 bushels of corn per acre, watermelons, els of corn per acre, waterm els of corn per acre, watermelons, canteloupes, scuppernong grapes, sweet potatoes, velvet beans, sugar cane, peanuts and every grain, fruit and flower that can be grown in any semi-tropical climate. Lowndes county has 435 miles of public highways, numerous concrete bridges and roads extending in all directions and making quick connections between all parts of the county.

Record Broken.

Bicknell, Ind., January 19.—The american No. 1 mine, of the American No. 1 mine, of the American Coal company, at Bicknell, yesterday broke its own world's record for a day's output with a hoist of 6,171 off tons, it was announced today.

The following comment was received by Derenus-Daniel & Co.:

"Professional operators worked all morning to force lower prices, and when the market dwindled into a specialty affair around midday, sellers became more confident. They were helped by a rise in call money rate, at this time it does not look as though the selling meant anything more than professional operations, but it does appear as if market might go somewhat lower before the close.

Profit Taking in Motor Shares Features Stocks

BY R. L. BARNUM

New York, January 19.—There was some profit taking in the motor, shares today and shrewd observers of the market would not be surprised to see such leaders as Studebaker and Chandler sell off a couple more points. However, it is believed that these stocks will resume their advance as soon as the recent upward movement has been digested. A stock that moves only one way is a dangerous one.

Railway equipment shares were also soft. But coppers and steels were strong. There was some talk heard today that an anouncement would be made tomorrow regarding the merger plans of the independent steel companies. In inside circles, however, it was stated to your correspondent that there would be no announcement tomorrow. It is safe to assume that there will be no merger with the steel shares selling around their present low level.

J. A. Campbell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, said today that business in the steel trade this month was running about the same as for December. He predicted, however, that there would be expansion in February with inventory taking completed and with plans being made for spring. He also predicted that there would be no substantial reductions in prices from the present level, as selling prices were now around cost or lower.

A banker who knows what he is talking about said today in private conversation that the $27,582,000 4 per cent bonds of the New Haven falling due April 1, would not be paid off in cash. He said that the holders would either have to renew these bonds at perhaps a higher interest rate or something else. But the chances are the New Haven

Call money opened today at 4 1-2 per cent, and then advanced to 6. Part of this was due to withdrawals of balances by out of town banks, of balances by out of town banks, and part to government withdrawals and part to new financing. J. P. Morgan & Co. announced today that subscribers to the $30,000,000 Southern Railway bonds who asked for $100,000 or way bonds who asked for $100,000 or more would only get 20 per cent, and those asking for more only 10 per cent. This financing was not a great deal in itself, but it was enough to make a difference. And then, too, some more new financing is being arranged and the bankers interested are not sorry to see money look a little

The statement as published shows plainly how assets more than enough to cover deposits can be turned into cash immediately if necessary to pay of all deposits. That is important in these times. Wall street banks and stock exchange houses have always gone on the theory that advertising opens the way to misrepresentation. It is the other way round. Such advertising as the Corn Exchange is doing is protective.

WHOLESALE PRICES REMAIN STATIONARY

Washington, January 19.—The general level of wholesale rpcies remained stationary through November and December, the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor statistics of the department of labor announced today. The bureau's weighted index number, with the 1913 price level denoted by 100, stood at 149 in those two months, with the prices of 327 commodities considered. Foodstuffs, farm products, cloths clothing, chemicals and drugs showed a declining tendency, which was pronounced in such articles as cattle hay, hops, peanuts, butter, cheese, eggs, lard, lemons, oranges and sugar. Metals and house furnishing goods were listed as unchanged, while fue prices showed a alight increase and building materials advanced 3 per cent over the November level.

An increase for the month of 2 per cent was reported in the group of miscellaneous commodities, including bran, mill feed, middlings, linseed meal, lubricating oil, paper manila rope, Mexican sisal and tankage. Of the 327 commodities, 116 were shown to have decreased, 89 increased and 122 remained stationary in price in December.

The general level of wholesale prices in December, according to the announcement, was 21 per cent lower than it was one year before, with house furnishing goods showing the greatest decrease, of 37 per cent, metals and building materials 24 per cent, farm products 21 1-2 per cent, farm products 21 1-2 per cent, farm products 21 1-2 per cent, farm products showed smaller decreases.

STILL FIGHTING DENNY APPOINTMENT

Savannah, Ga., January 19.—(Special.)—According to advices from Washington, the fight is still steady against the confirmation of the appointment of George V. Denny to be collector of the port and John F. Curran to be postmaster at Savannah. Senator Watson maintains his attitude of consistent oppoisition to their appointment and has asked the committees to hear him—but has other matters pressing so that his side of the case will not be heard for some days.

At an examination by health workers in Anglaize county. Ohio, it was bound that of 426 school children exmined there were 401 defectives.

Monsignor Migone celebrated mass this morning in an apartment adjoining the pope's bedroom. The door to the sick room remained open, so that the pontiff might hear. Many diplomats visited the vatican today, seeking news; all of them were received in the ante-chamber, none being permitted to disturb the patient.

It is said the pope contracted his present illness last Thursday, after he had celebrated mass in Matilde chapel in the presence of the college of propaganda. He received visitors and attended to his usual pontifical duties until Tuesday. He has suffered from coughing spells, due to irritation of the bronchi, and has shown considerable restlessness.

Like a Great Family. More like a great family reunion of 500 relatives did the kich organization appear to be as it gathered for its annual dinner, a customary event for the last several years. Those who have attended all of them concede that sthe 1922 gathering surpassed those of the past in fun and fellowabin.

Walter Rich, vice president, made a frank, optimistic, heart-to-heart talk on business conditions. He told them the bankers are in a more cheerful frame of mind, and that they look for a steady improvement in business conditions.

a steady improvement in business conditions.

"I feel that way, too," he said. "I feel that prices have stabilized, that employees are agoing back to work, that the new crops are about to be planted with optimism."

Eloquent tribute to Morris Rich, president and founder of the big store, was paid by the speaker.

"In my 22 years of active association with this worthy gentleman there has been one principle modestly propounded by him that will linger in my memory, and one that I have handed down to the Rich store family for many years—that of straightforward integrity, never swerving from the many years—that of straightforward integrity, never swerving from the straight path to obtain results, whether in time of depression or in times of prosperity. On this rugged rock is founded the underlying principles of Rich's success in Atlanta and in the south."

York Given Present.

York Given Present.

Lucian York, manager of the store, was presented with a fishing outfit by his associates as a token of their esteem. Arthur Wasser, store superintendent, made the presentation. Although it is generally known that his hobby is ministrel shows and grand opera, his employees know that it is the rod and reel that lure him from his office to Bull Sinice and other famous Chattahoochee fishing resorts. The outfit included rod, reel, line, float, sinker and hook.

Several well-known performers appeared in song and dance numbers, but the entertainment couldn't be passed up without particular reference being made to little Miss Freda Sullivan, a dainty dancer, whose years are very few, but whose mastery of the semiclassic terpsichore is unquestioned. Possessing nimble feet and excellent control of her shoulders she captivated the audience.

FISTIC BATTLE STAGED BY WOMEN IN COURT

Considerable excitement was caused in Judge Luther Z. Rosser's 'court Thursday when a fight was staged between Mrs. C. B. Bearden, mother of W. H. Bearden, defendant in a civil suit which had just been dismissed, and Miss Ruth. Carter, divorced wife of Bearden, the defendant, and forser daughter-ip-law of Mrs. Bearden. Before any serious damage resulted the women were separated by W. B. Smith, who is manager of the Fourth National bank building, and C. B. Bearden, husband of Mrs. Bearden, who was slapped.

who was slapped.

The litigation grew out of a note signed by W. H. Bearden, which the plaintiff, Miss Carter, and her mother, Mrs. Edna E. Carter, had indorsed, and which they alleged they were forced to pay. The case was dismissed on a plea of minority of Bearden, which his mother substantiated.
